Welcome from COST

Dear Participant,

I am pleased to welcome you to this COST Conference "The Cities of Tomorrow: the Challenges of Horizon 2020".

Since COST's foundation, our original mission has been to enable breakthrough scientific developments leading to new concepts and products, thereby contributing to strengthening Europe's research and innovation capacities.

Yet, observing the fast changes taking place in the scientific and technological landscape as well as responding to pressing societal challenges and policy, our organisation is evolving to adapt and respond to those challenges. This translates in reinforcing our principles of excellence, openness and inclusiveness by fostering new ideas, sharing knowledge and ensure the output oriented approach of the Actions we support.

The COST member countries have to reinforce the operation with the aim to act as a strong contributor to the H2020 objectives. This was set in motion by the signature with the European Commission of the Framework Partnership Agreement (FPA) setting the frame conditions and strategic lines for COST for the next seven years.

This allows us today to provide support for this high level conference aiming at understanding the key challenges facing the cities of tomorrow, face them by adopting innovative solutions, with the intention to contribute to the goals of Horizon 2020.

This interdisciplinary conference is a unique event designed to bring new insights to the cities of tomorrow by gathering views and discussions from a diverse set of stakeholders. Indeed, particular attention was given to select participants across geographical levels and types of organisations both inside and outside COST networks. For instance, the conference will receive contributions from EU, regional as well as city level perspectives. Also, it will convey the findings both from experienced and early stage researchers from diverse institutional set-ups ranging from universities, public research organisations and research oriented companies.

As a final word, I am confident that this event will constitute a significant step in reaching a common vision for "the cities of tomorrow", and ultimately benefit the European citizens' daily lives.

Dr Monica Dietl Director, COST Office

COST Domains linked to the Conference

Earth System Science and Environmental Management (ESSEM)

ESSEM encompasses the rapidly-growing science and technology agendas relating to better understanding, observing, modelling and predicting the Earth system and thereby improved management of environmental conditions.

Individuals, Societies, Cultures and Health (ISCH) ISCH supports the development of knowledge and insights for citizens, democratic debate and decision-making in the public, private and voluntary spheres.

www.cost.eu/isch

Information and Communication Technologies (ICT)

ICT covers scientific and technical research in all areas of information and communication science and technologies.

www.cost.eu/ict

Transport and Urban Development (TUD)

TUD fosters research coordination in the fields of transport and the built environment, which play a strategic role in the modern society and economy.

About COST

COST (European Cooperation in Science and Technology) is Europe's longest-running intergovernmental framework for cooperation in science and technology funding cooperative scientific projects called 'COST Actions'. With a successful history of implementing scientific networking projects for over 40 years, COST offers scientists the opportunity to embark upon bottom-up, multidisciplinary and collaborative networks across all science and technology domains. Beyond the EU-27 member states, COST countries include Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia, Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Iceland, Norway, Serbia, Switzerland and Turkey. Israel is a cooperating state. Beyond the European borders, COST opens the European Research Area (ERA) to cooperation with non-European countries on the basis of mutual benefit.
